FEDS LOOK INTO U.O.F.C. WEB THREAT

HOW DIVERSE IS THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO?

A group of U.C. students is accusing the school of not addressing a "culture of racial intolerance" on campus. Here's a look at the racial/ethnic makeup of students enrolled in undergraduate classes.

STUDENTS THREATENED AFTER PETITIONING SCHOOL FOR INCREASED RACIAL TOLERANCE

By Megan Crepeau | REDEYE

A group of University of Chicago students who petitioned the school to address its alleged "culture of racial intolerance" are now facing threats of violence that federal authorities are investigating.

This week, a student's Facebook account was hacked, and an explicit threat was posted about a student who circulated the petition.

In an email to students, university President Robert J. Zimmer and provost Eric Isaacs condemned the attack, calling it "unacceptable" and saying that "an investigation is underway with the help of federal law enforcement agencies and third-party website providers to see if we can determine who posted the message."

The FBI would not confirm or deny whether it was involved in investigating the incident.

"This comes in the midst of other incidents in which members of our community have felt targeted, harassed, or threatened on the basis of their identity. Harassment and threats on the basis of identity are completely antithetical to the values of the University and will not be tolerated," stated the University of Chicago email, which was obtained by RedEye.

An online petition demanding measures such as racial sensitivity training and a more diverse faculty began circulating after students complained about classmates wearing racist Halloween costumes.

"Everything started the night of Halloween. I was on a [campus] shuttle and I noticed a person wearing a cholo costume," said Vincente Perez, a 20-year-old University of Chicago student, describing a derogatory term for Mexican-American men.

The costumed student, whom Perez describes as being of Asian descent, was wearing a red bandanna, dark sunglasses and a plaid flannel shirt with only the top button buttoned. His pants were sagging to reveal black basketball shorts.

"As we were getting off I was saying things like, 'Thanks for the racist costume, think about what you're doing, it's really [bleeping] racist,'" Perez said. "[The costumed person and his friends] weren't really responding to us. They basically scoffed at us."

Shortly afterward, Facebook photos surfaced of what appeared to be students wearing similar clothing. One posed with his hands behind his back while an apparently white student pretended to beat him.

Calling the Halloween costumes emblematic of an unfriendly campus environment for students of color, Perez and others delivered a written statement to the administration last week requesting "drastic change in the way that diversity is understood at this institution."

A meeting Friday between university representatives, Perez and Jaime Sanchez, the statement's other author, was constructive, according to university spokesman Jeremy Manier.

"University leaders will move forward with a thoughtful response soon, and will continue working with students, staff and faculty to move these issues forward," Manier wrote in an email to RedEye.

But the school's response did not satisfy Perez and Sanchez, who opted to begin circulating an online petition.

"We've given the university an entire week to respond, and that's a lot, given that Halloween was a few weeks ago," Perez said. "Every step of the way we've given the administration time to respond and they haven't shown us that it's a priority. That in itself is another slap in the face."

Among the petition's demands: required courses on race and ethnicity; more effort to hire and retain diverse faculty; and disciplinary protocols to deal with students who engage in "discriminatory actions."

The racist Halloween costumes are just one example of a campus culture that does not fully include minorities, Sanchez said.

"Students of color at the University of Chicago are academically disenfranchised," said Sanchez, 21. Minority students are expected to be the spokespeople for their backgrounds in the classroom, he said, and are pressured to endure subtle racism without complaint.

Manier declined to respond to accusations that the campus environment is unfriendly to students of color, adding that an official statement from the university is forthcoming.

On Tuesday night, the Facebook account of one of Perez's friends was hacked, and the hacker posted a threat that mentioned Perez by name. The post, obtained by RedEye, states in part, "Vincente you are next. None of your profiles are safe. This is the beginning of our rape season . . ."

About 44 percent of students at the College of the University of Chicago—that is, mainly undergraduate students are white, and 8.5 percent identify as Hispanic or Latino, according to the most recent data available from the university's registrar. Seventeen percent of undergraduate students identify as Asian, 4.7 percent as black, and 3.5 percent as multi-racial.

A campus that is nearly half white has an impact on the school's culture, Sanchez said.

"It's just really a matter of people being very ignorant about the impact that words have on people's minds," he said.

Confessions of a nightlife reporter

Kate Bernot

» @kbernot

When I tell people what I do for a living, I know they imagine a thumping bass line ("untz untz untz") accompanied by a parade of the two dancing girls emoji.

In reality, being a nightlife reporter is not quite that glamorous. It's a job I've loved, and one that I'm honored to have held at RedEye for the past two years. I'm leaving Chicago in December to move to Phoenix—peace out, puffer coats!—but before I do, I want to set the record straight about exactly what my job has involved. So now, Usher-style, these are my confessions:

1. I'm a morning person. Late nights at the club? Ha. HAHA. Nope. I'm up around 6 every morning and am usually one of the first people in the newsroom. You do not want to get between me and the coffee pot.

2. I like bourbon, but not as much as the rest of you seem to. Pass the gin, thanks.

3. I spend 90 percent of my day at my desk ...

4. ... eating Lean Cuisines for lunch. Most week days involve wiping sauce from the butternut squash ravioli off my keyboard.

5. I hate the word libations. On menus, on websites, basically anywhere. Never write with words you wouldn't speak aloud.

6. I once nearly cried outside El Hefe Super Macho Taqueria. I was reporting a story on Sunday daytime parties and needed to check out the debauchery going on inside this River North bar. After standing in line for more than 45 minutes, I wasn't any closer to the other side of the velvet ropes. Was I not pretty enough? Not dressed expensively? WHY DON'T YOU LOVE ME, EL HEFE? Cue the frustration tears.

7. Miller High Life is delicious. Yep, I can tell you all about malt backbones and hop varietals and the specific fruity funk of a saison yeast, but I'm adamant that High Life really is the champagne of beers.

8. I still can't spell 'liqueur.' Two years of typing this word, and I still get the squiggly red spell check line every. damn. time.

9. I wrote a story about boxed wine ... that comes in a package shaped like a purse. Lowest low or proud professional moment? Jury's out.

10. I don't like bar karaoke. But when pressed to do it at a college bar in Madison, Wis., I sang Third Eye Blind's "Motorcycle Drive By" with a duet partner so intoxicated he dropped the microphone.

11. I have eaten way too many of the free cheese balls at Archie's. Waking up with orange dust in your hair isn't what Beyoncé was talking about, I don't think. #flawless

12. I have never called out of work with a hangover. But here's to future career goals.

Cheers, Chicago.

4 SHOT, 1 FATALLY, IN HUMBOLDT PARK

Chicago Tribune

The shooting of four men, one of them fatally, in Humboldt Park on Wednesday reflects an ongoing conflict along Chicago Avenue, where control of drug sales sometimes leads to weeklong bouts of violence, according to police and neighbors.

The four were among at least 20 people shot, five fatally, within a half-mile of the intersection of Chicago and St. Louis avenues over the past four weeks, police said.

Three of Wednesday's victims were in a white car that appeared to have been sprayed with automatic weapon fire just before 12:30 p.m. in the 700 block of North St. Louis Avenue, just south of Chicago Avenue. The fourth man was standing on the street at the time.

Police said the location of the 30 or so bullet holes in the car—closely grouped in a 2-foot-by-2-foot area—point to an automatic weapon. According to police, a van pulled up alongside the car, and people began shooting before the van fled.

When police arrived they found the car, several piles of glass that seemed to trace the vehicle's path, a dozen shell casings and the four gunshot victims.

Police said the rest of the shell casings either kicked back into the shooter's van or were blown outside the crime scene.

Tyris T. Ferguson, 23, of the 800 block of North St. Louis Avenue, died of his wounds at Mount Sinai Hospital, according to police and the Cook County medical examiner's office. A 24-year-old man and a 31-year-old man were taken to Stroger Hospital in critical condition.

A police sergeant counts the number of bullets fired into a car involved in a multiple shooting at the corner of St. Louis and Chicago avenues Wednesday, Nov. 19, 2014, in Chicago. JOHN J. KIM/Tribune

A 26-year-old man who was hit while standing on the street was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital, where he was stable. He suffered a leg wound, police said.

The five killed in the area over the past four weeks were all men: Wednesday's victim; a 21-year-old Tuesday; a 22-year-old Sunday; a 36-year-old Nov. 4; and a 22-year-old Oct. 27. The 15 wounded range in age from 14 to 47, including three teens shot Oct. 23 in the same block as the latest incident.

Police said Wednesday's shooting was similar to a recent homicide that left 22-year-old Anthony Jackson dead in the 700 block of North Hamlin Avenue on Nov. 15. In that shooting, someone sprayed Jackson's car with gunfire, police said. He lost control of the car and hit several parked vehicles.

In Humboldt Park, a 23-year-old man was shot to death Wednesday in the 800 block of North St. Louis Avenue, police said. One day earlier, a 21-year-old man was found shot to death in the 700 block of North Spaulding Avenue.

On Saturday, a 33-year-old woman was fatally shot in the 3700 block of West Potomac Avenue and a 22-year-old man was shot to death in the 700 block of North Hamlin Avenue.

The victims on Spaulding and Hamlin avenues were documented gang members while the Potomac Avenue homicide is possibly gang related, according to police.

In Englewood on Monday, a 30-year-old man was shot to death in the 7200 block of South Carpenter Street and a 31-year-old man was fatally shot in the 7500 block of South Union Avenue. Four days earlier, a 21-year-old man was shot to death in the 5700 block of South Princeton Avenue, police said.

The Union Avenue and Carpenter Street victims were documented gang members, police said.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were logged in the past week in the Near North Side, Near West Side and West Pullman community areas, according to RedEye data.

Twenty-eight homicides have been reported so far this month, the same number recorded in all of November 2013, according to a RedEye analysis.

Montana gay wedding ban out

6 A federal judge struck down a Montana ban on same-sex marriages as unconstitutional Wednesday, handing gay rights activists the latest in a wave of legal victories as the nation awaits a potential definitive ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court.

U.S. District Judge Brian Morris overturned a 2004 amendment to the state's constitution prohibiting same-sex marriage in response to a lawsuit brought by the ACLU of Montana on behalf of four gay and lesbian couples.

"The time has come for Montana to follow all the other states within the Ninth Circuit [judicial district] and recognize that laws that ban same-sex marriage violate the constitutional right of same-sex couples to equal protection laws," Morris wrote in his 18-page ruling.

The decision marks the latest in a series of court victories chalked up by gay rights activists over the past year—although a Cincinnati-based federal appeals court on Nov. 6 became the first to uphold same-sex marriage bans. That decision by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals backing four states' bans created a split within the courts, increasing the chances the Supreme Court will rule once and for all on whether states can ban gay marriage.

The Montana judge barred Montana from enforcing its ban on gay nuptials and said that it must immediately recognize same-sex marriages from other states.

If his ruling is upheld, Montana would become the 35th state to permit gay marriage. State Attorney General Tim Fox, who defended the state's gay marriage ban, did not im-

STUDY: GAY PDA NOT OK

A new study led by a Indiana University researcher suggests that heterosexuals are generally supportive of legal benefits for same-sex couples, but don't want to see those couples display affection in public. Obama to announce immigration plan

7 President Obama will outline a plan Thursday to relax U.S. immigration policy and grant relief from deportation to as many as 5 million undocumented immigrants in a go-it-alone move that will deepen a partisan divide with Republicans.

The White House said Obama will deliver a televised speech Thursday night laying out the plan followed by a trip to Las Vegas on Friday to build support. Nevada is home to the highest proportion of undocumented immigrants in the country.

Some conservative Republicans have threatened to fight the move by imposing funding restrictions in a must-pass spending bill, which could conceivably lead to a government shutdown. Republican leaders, however, have stressed they will not allow a shutdown.

Obama's executive orders are expected to remove the threat of deportation for as many as 5 million of the estimated 11 million people living illegally in the United States. This is a significant step for a president known for having deported thousands of illegal migrants.

The Hawks' moms need not worry—they travel with clean underwear

By Brian Hedger | FOR REDEYE

The annual “circus trip” has arrived for the Blackhawks, which means six tough games and 11 days on the road. That’s almost two full weeks of plane hopping, hotel living, travel dining and, apparently, lots of Skype and Facetime. The games the Hawks will play will be for public consumption, but RedEye wanted a peek behind the scenes.

BRIAN HEDGER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR. @BRIANHEDGER

PATRICK KANE

Anything you absolutely have to take with you on a long road trip?

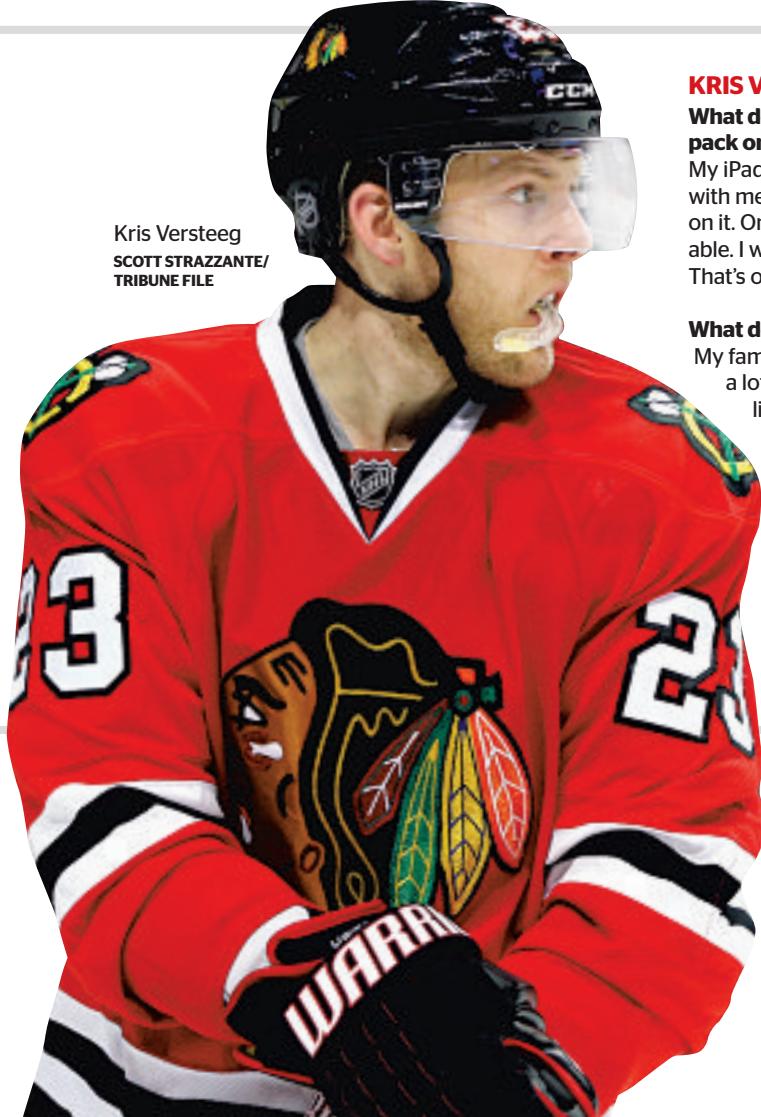

I guess I’d say my cellphone, my iPhone.

What do you miss the most on a long road trip?

Just the routine of coming back home from practice and having the rest of the day to do what you have to do, and hang out with the people that you’re closest to, to get away from the game a little bit. When you’re on the road, you’re with the team the whole time and hanging out with the guys, which is good too. I think we all enjoy that and have fun with that, but just kind of getting away from the game a little bit is what I miss most on the road.

What do you have to remember to pack on a long road trip like this one?

My iPad is what I absolutely have to take with me. I have all my TV shows downloaded on it. One time [I forgot it] and I was so miserable. I was. You just listen to music, and that's awful. That's only good for a couple minutes.

What do you miss the most when you're gone?

My family, especially my dog [Beauty]. I miss him a lot. Always. You know, those guys don't live very long. And when I leave, he just puts on the saddest face ever, so I miss him like crazy. He's a Burmese mountain dog. He's almost 4. I got him when he was 7 weeks old and he was already 14 pounds. He's 120 pounds almost. I Facetime with [my wife] to put him on all the time. I really do. Even if I forget my iPad. You can do it on the phone, too. I love him so much, that guy.

ANTTI RAANTA

What do you have to remember to pack for long road trips?

Well, of course, a computer and just some, like, very comfy, comfy shorts and nice T-shirts and sweatshirts, so you feel good in the hotel.

Why the computer?

Well, you stay a lot in your room, so [there's] Netflix if you want to watch TV shows and movies. And in my case, there's lots of Facetime and Skype back home [to Finland], so it's nice to have a computer with me to do all that kind of stuff.

What do you watch on Netflix?

Usually I use Netflix if there's an Internet connection. Sometimes you just have to download something from iTunes or somewhere else. Usually, I watch more easygoing shows like "How I Met Your Mother" and that kind of stuff, so you don't have to concentrate too much. You just have

Nuccio Dinuzzo/Tribune

ANDREW SHAW

What would make the trip miserable for you if you forgot to bring it?

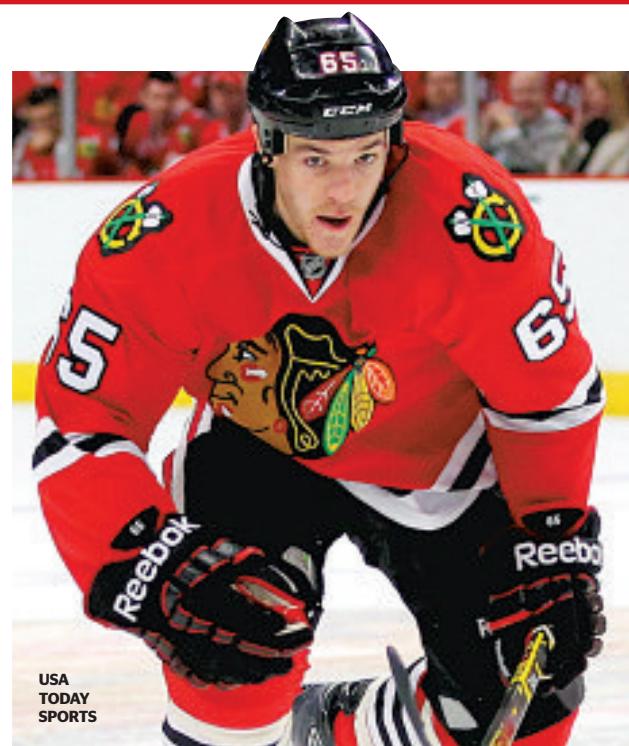

A lot of clean underwear. Toothbrush, maybe? Those are two good things to have. Also, an extra suit, just in case something happens to your go-to, I guess. You need a backup if you spill anything on it or it rips. We've seen it all.

Any electronics?

Just an iPad and a cellphone charger. Forgot my phone charger once, but that wasn't too big of a deal. You can always borrow one of those. If I forgot my iPad, it wouldn't be the end of the world. I lived without it before, so I figure I could probably do it again.

What do you miss while on the road?

A home-cooked meal probably. You're always eating the same food all the time pretty much, and you kind of get sick of it. Pregame meals, you're kind of eating the same thing. I just like having a nice home-cooked meal. My favorite is pork chops, mashed potatoes, asparagus ... and a salad.

DANIEL CARILLOWhat do you have to remember to take with you on a long road trip?

Let's see ... computer. Some guys, I've seen them pack an Xbox 360. Your iPod's on your phone now, so you don't really have to worry about taking that. Oh, Bose headphones. That's about it. Anything Wi-Fi compatible. Also, a change of clothes.

When you're on the road, what do you miss the most?

Just, like, your own bed and your own routine. But you lose a lot of weight on the road.

There's no snacks or anything. So the road's pretty good for that. You're not at home next to the pantry, waiting to eat everything.

your phone in your hand and the show is just on there. Sometimes it's like "Family Guy" or "Breaking Bad" and that kind of stuff ... of course "Breaking Bad" is a little bit different than those other two. Usually it's just some easygoing shows.

What are some things you miss the most?

Well, maybe some things at home, but not too much. The hotels are always like five stars and great places where we stay. The beds are usually really good. Maybe [you miss] just like hanging out at home and going out, because in the hotel you're just, like, lying in the bed all day. That's not too great.

Are the hotel beds better than your own?

[Laughs.] Sometimes.

1	Summarize the Cubs' pitch to free agent Jon Lester for us.	"You could be a part of history! We know that applies everywhere. But here especially!"	"Did you hear that our new manager likes to buy rounds of shots and beer?"	"You DO know we're going to the World Series now that we have Joe Maddon, right?"	"Have you seen Buffalo? We can offer you less snow ... buuuuuut, that's about it."	The Theo Epstein "This is why I left Boston" tour.
2	Why was Jay Cutler nominated for FedEx Air Player of the Week?	That's what happens when you defeat a powerhouse like the Minnesota Vikings. #eyeroll	He absolutely, positively didn't blow the game last week.	It's the only time he's ever been confused for Aaron Rodgers.	Looks like Chicagoans aren't the only ones who are amazed when Cutler ends the game with fewer than three turnovers.	His prayers were answered. Literally!! #JumpBallsGoneGood
3	Why do the Blackhawks keep sending players to and from Rockford?	Insert "League of Their Own" reference. Such as: "Marla Hooch. What a hitter!"	Because sending them to Milwaukee would be too cruel.	Rack up those Greyhound bus miles ...	They're mistaking it for Fraggle Rock and love singing "Sent down to Fraggle Rock!"	It's the AHL—Another Hawk Limping replacements.
4	Tiger Woods is so angry right now ...	Stop asking me about Tiger Woods.	... he's about to take out a 9-iron and hit the side of his own SUV!	... because a fake interview is more accurate than his actual ones.	I could make some sex addict joke, but I'll leave that up to the readers.	... he might fake us all out and win another major.
5	If you could take over any athlete's Twitter account, whose would it be?	Tiger Woods. Just kidding. Anyone else. Not J.R. Smith.	Matthew Stafford so I could challenge a Bears fan to a $25,000 fight.	Charlie Sheen. No jokes necessary.	Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie, just to see who can come up with a creative tweet after using 27 characters for his name.	Derrick Rose. Walk in my shoes #LiveInTheWood Challenge. By Dana Moran | REDEYE

For fans of "The Hunger Games," it all comes down to this—or at least it would if Lionsgate hadn't decided to split "Mockingjay" into two movies. At any rate, the beginning of the end starts Thursday, when we return to Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence), Peeta (Josh Hutcherson) and their Panem friends and foes.

As you may have guessed from the "Mockingjay—Part 1" marketing, things will be a little different this time around. We won't return to the Hunger Games arena—there's no time for that, what with civil war breaking out. The beloved Peeta may have been turned to the dark side, and moody Katniss has to summon more strength than ever before if she's going to prove herself a leader.

Before resuming our journey, we took a look back at some of Katniss and Peeta's biggest victories and defeats throughout the first two movies to see how these heroes made themselves legends in "Hunger Games" lore. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

A WHOLE NEW WORLD

Since "Mockingjay—Part 1" moves far outside the Hunger Games arena, here are a few new faces and places to know. D.M.

President Alma Coin
(Julianne Moore)

The "other" president, Alma Coin is the leader of District 13 and the rebellion. She's also a little threatened by Katniss' popularity.

Cressida (Natalie Dormer)

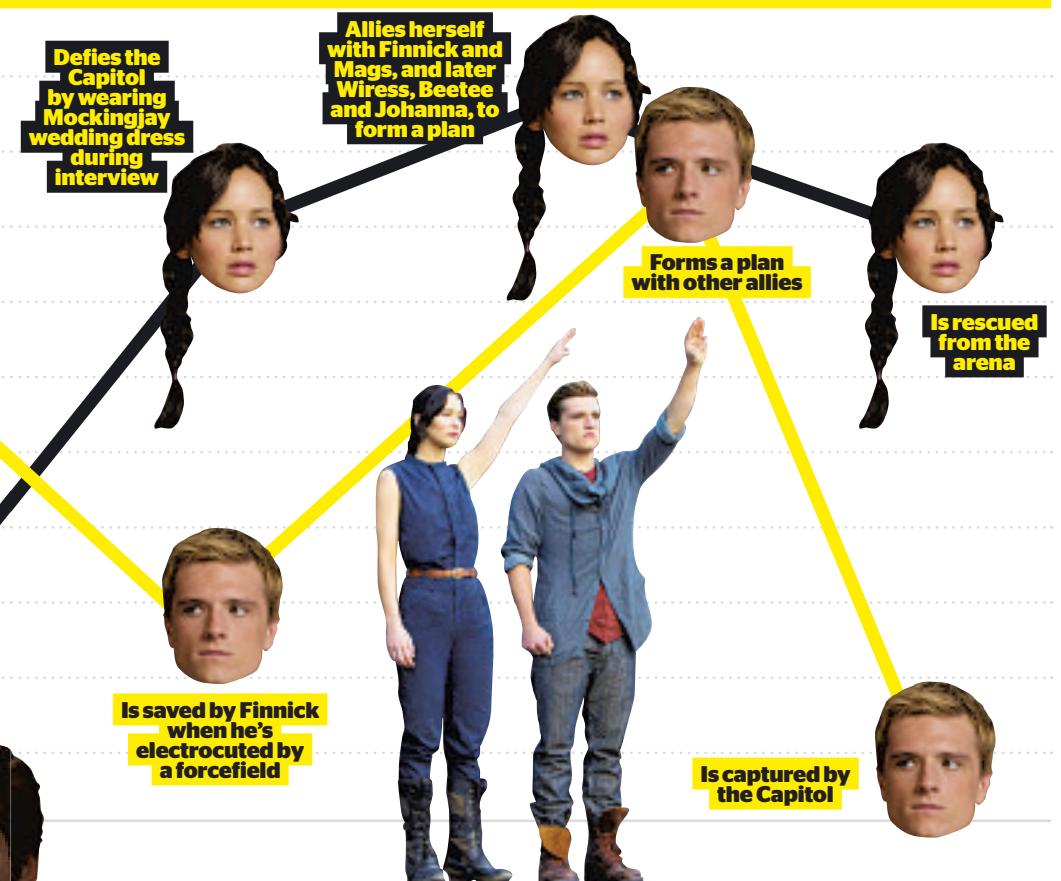

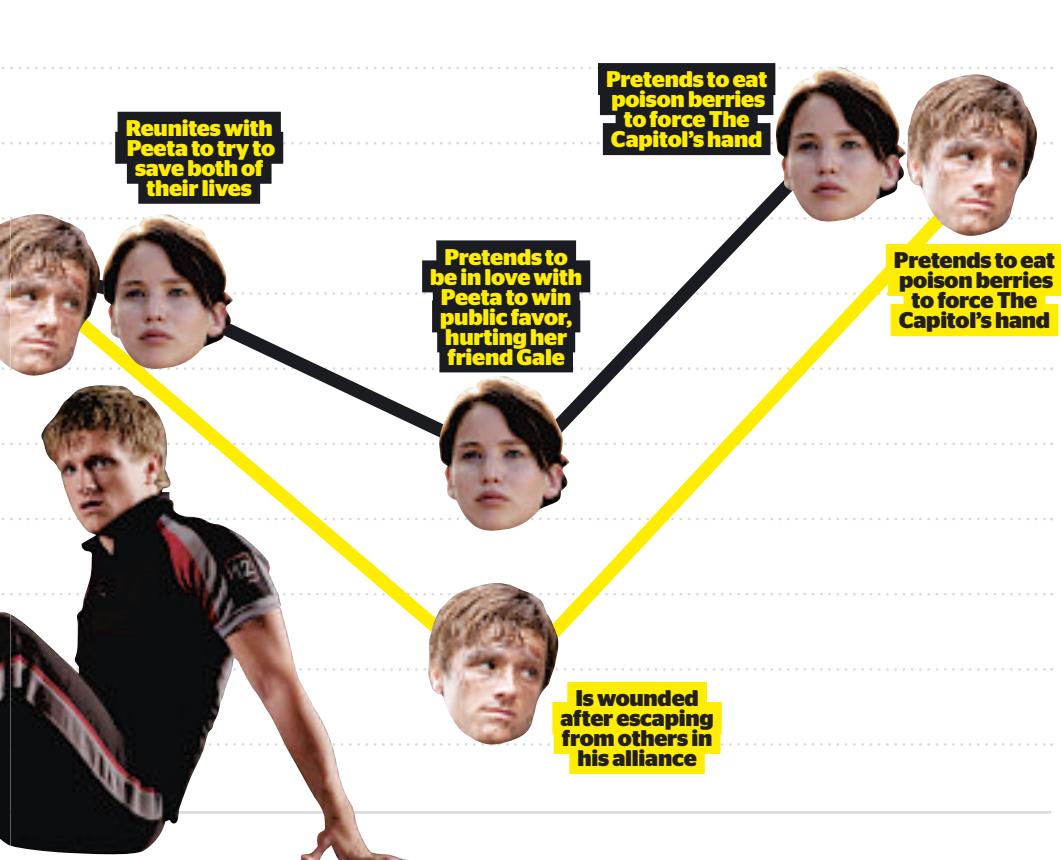

A filmmaker who records propaganda videos of Katniss (known as propos) to inspire the rebels—and possibly intimidate the Capitol.

Gale (Liam Hemsworth)

While his time in the first two films mostly was spent scowling at the TV when Katniss gets all lovey-dovey with Peeta, Gale steps up in "Mockingjay" as a soldier and one of the leaders in the effort to rescue Peeta.

Effie (Elizabeth Banks)
While Katniss' escort doesn't play a big role in the "Mockingjay" novel, Banks' effervescent Effie proved just too good to exclude from the films—though her bright wardrobe hasn't fared quite as well.

District 13
Yes, it does exist! This secret underground district has been preparing for an uprising for years, and is strictly governed to ensure its citizens' survival.

Phillip Seymour Hoffman

Penultimate film keeps the fire alive

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

» @mattpais

Even if Philip Seymour Hoffman hadn't passed away in February, "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay—Part 1" would thrive on his delicious supporting turn as Plutarch Heavensbee. (You should know by now that in this series' universe all the names are that wacky.)

"You've been in battle!" Plutarch cries when Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) feebly attempts to act in a propaganda video intended to re-motivate the surviving districts toward rebellion against the Capitol. The tone of Hoffman's voice is priceless, as is the smile on his face as Plutarch grins to himself after a Katniss one-liner.

There will be 5 billion more dystopian movies. We only have one PSH performance left, in "Mockingjay—Part 2." Savor it.

Fortunately, "Part 1" isn't some time-killathon like "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows—Part 1" or "The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn—Part 1." Rather, the first half of "Mockingjay"—or, as I like to call it, "THG: MJ—P1," establishes a consistent simmer in which something of consequence and interest actually is happening. With Plutarch's encouragement, District 13's President Coin (Julianne Moore) maintains Katniss' role as the face of revolution, eventually bringing on a filmmaker named Cressida

!!! The Hunger Games: Mockingjay—Part 1

(Natalie Dormer of "Game of Thrones") to capture footage of the so-called Mockingjay's fierceness on the battlefield. If not for the whole "humanity-threatening-uprising" thing going on, there's no doubt Cressida's head tattoo and hairstyle would be "the Rachel" of Panem.

Will President Snow (Donald Sutherland) ever not be a huge A-hole? Has Peeta (Josh Hutcherson), looking gaunt and asking for a cease-fire, defected to the other side? The answers are obvious. And, sorry, I appreciate Prim's (Willow Shields) love of animals, but I still don't care about her cat, who gets a good deal of screen time here.

Yet returning director Francis Lawrence and a new team of writers, adapting part of Suzanne Collins' final book in the series, allow the characters to engagingly play off each other, somewhat freed by the lack of another trip to the Hunger Games arena. Woody Harrelson continues his grumbling charm as Haymitch, and Elizabeth Banks brings out new shades of Effie, now missing her trademark style and "condemned to this life of jumpsuits."

And there's Lawrence, ever commanding and vulnerable, elevating this kinda-funny, effectively serious study of oppression and defiance. She even delivers a song in a smoky voice that's vaguely reminiscent of Norah Jones. Place those EGOT 2025 bets now.

A thin, cliched plot stretched way too far

A coincidence in search of a movie, "All Relative" introduces one far-fetched idea and then frustratingly refuses to expand on it. The premise suffocates the movie.

The farce begins when Harry (Chicago native Jonathan Sadowski) meets Grace (Sara Paxton) at a bowling alley. She's kinda seeing someone, so nothing is holding him back when Maren (Connie Nielsen), an older woman coming on strong, buys him a drink later that night. Before you can say, "Mrs. Robinson, you're trying to seduce me," Harry has spent the weekend blowing Maren's mind, only to walk away when Grace—inexplicably now Harry's good pal—suddenly becomes available. And get this: After a month of relationship bliss, Harry goes to meet Grace's parents and ... guess who!

All Relative

NR

"All Relative" screens at 10 p.m. Thursday at the Music Box Theatre (3733 N. Southport Ave. 773-871-6604)

If somehow you couldn't guess, Maren is Grace's mom. A movie can survive a whopper like this if it serves as the catalyst for something bigger, like in last year's terrific "Enough Said." In "All Relative," the one secret about how dude slept with his gal's mom hovers over the entire movie, leading to many scenes of people almost coming clean and the inevitable explosion, "You had sex with my mom?"

What should be lively and impassioned feels sluggish and exhausted by itself, though there is sweetness to these characters. Sadowski allows Harry to be a nice guy who values honesty without turning him into a wet noodle. Paxton's ("Cheap Thrills") so much better than a role that gives Grace no dimension outside her romantic life. But Harry's innocent mistake reveals nothing about him, and the conversation it generates between Maren and her husband (David Aaron Baker) is one of several times in which "All Relative" suggests a confession and apology is all it takes to heal deep wounds. Meanwhile, writer-director J.C. Khoury lets scenes go on far too long and passes on considering if honesty isn't always the best policy.

Jonathan Sadowski and Connie Nielsen in 'All Relative'

In case that weren't enough to sour you, there's the convenience of Harry finishing a graduate program in architecture and learning Grace's dad is a big-time architecture exec. Add in Harry's token, sex-crazed black friend (Al Thompson) and you've got the recipe for something that can only be served at an unappealing room temperature.

MORE THAN 'JUST'
ASHOT AND A BEER,
BOILERMAKERS FINALLY
SEE THE BAR SPOTLIGHT

TWICE AS NICE

By Kate Bernot | REDEYE

Rio Grande boilermaker (Shiner Bock and tequila) at Henry's Swing Club

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

BOILERMAKERS MAY BE THE MOST ELEMENTAL OF PAIRINGS:

a shot of liquor and a beer. Unadulterated, uncomplicated, unfussy. Even your grandpa's favorite dive bar can pour them. So why are bartenders highlighting boilermakers on cocktail menus next to creative, multi-ingredient original cocktails?

The reason may be as straightforward as the combo itself. “[Bartenders] went through the speakeasy and waxed mustache phase. The natural tendencies of bartenders is to go back to something more simple, more primal,” said Michael Rubel, beverage director at Henry’s Swing Club, which has a section on the menu devoted to boilermakers. “They’re a good corrective to some of the complicated cocktails, to a lot of preciousness.” Plus, most bartenders really like drinking them. “It’s the natural beverage of choice for a lot of bartenders,” Rubel said. “When a bartender gets done making really great craft cocktails, what do you really want?”

There are only two aspects of boilermakers that seem to cause any confusion: where the term came from, and how they should be consumed. “I have no idea where the name comes from,” said Paul Sauter of Tippling Hall, which also features boilermakers on its menu. “But I could certainly tell you that ... people have always liked consuming two types of alcohol together. Who started calling it a boilermaker? I don’t think we’ll ever know.” Other bartenders I spoke to echoed Sauter’s shrug. Even the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers website has a section devoted to the mystery. Equally perplexing for some is whether the shot should be consumed before the beer, or dropped into the beer like a “bomb.” On this issue, at least, I found some answers. ‘A depth charge’ is when you actually put the shot inside the beer. So to me, a boilermaker is emphatically not that,” Rubel said. “It’s just booze in a glass and a beer. Period. There’s a certain gravity there, so the games of dropping it in there, it takes away from that.” Now that you’re ready to take this drink seriously, here’s where to find new versions of a classic pairing.

Lone Wolf

806 W. Randolph St. 312-600-9391

The West Loop bar recently retooled its menu to include a thoughtful selection of boilermaker pairings ($12-$15), from approachable (bourbon and pilsner) to adventurous (green chartreuse and Three Floyds' Zombie Dust). "I've sat down and tasted these out with all the beers and really tried to figure out flavors that have gone well together," Lone Wolf bar director Stephen Cole said. That includes a shot of blanco tequila paired with Founders Centennial IPA. "The beer's bright, piney, almost marijuana-like and grapefruit notes go so well with agave spirits," Cole said. His favorite combo, though, is a shot of green chartreuse and a Three Floyds Zombie Dust pale ale. "Bartenders that know me, [when I go to their bars], there's a shot of green chartreuse sitting there next to a hoppy beer."

Tippling Hall

646 N. Franklin St. 312-448-9922

In between menu pages of shaken, stirred and draft cocktails at this new River North cocktail bar, you'll find a bright red-and-yellow page devoted to "Double Fisters!" (tagline: "Finally ... fun with both hands!") There are some eyebrow-raising pairs on there, not all of which are technically boilermakers. These combos including a Dickelback ($7)—a shot of George Dickel whiskey paired with a beef broth chaser—which bartender Paul Sauter said is Tippling Hall's take on a pickleback (shot of whiskey and shot of pickle juice). Two drinks not enough? Go all in with the Blarney Miller ($9), a triple-fister that includes a shot of Irish whiskey, shot of pickle juice, a shot of sangrita (a Mexican chaser that Tippling Hall makes with tomato, cucumber and pomegranate) and a 7-ounce Miller High Life bottle.

Though you can walk into nearly any bar and order a shot and a beer, Rubel believes boilermakers deserve their own spotlight. "People who enjoy a shot and a beer are excited to see them on the menu and that someone respects that," he said. "We're going to give each a name and make them as important as any seven-ingredient cocktail on there." Try the Packaged Goods ($6), an ultra-Chicago combo of malort and an Old Style draft, or a Staff Meeting, which combines a shot of fernet amaro with a can of Founders All Day IPA ($9). Drinking like your dad (or with your dad)? Order a shot of bonded bourbon and a can of Stroh's, which Rubel has dubbed Hamtramck after a neighborhood in northern Detroit.

Coming soon: Barley & Brass

2015 W. Division St.

This forthcoming tavern from the brothers behind River North burger spot 25 Degrees will highlight boilermakers on its beverage menu when it opens in the former Fame space in Wicker Park. Expect to see house-infused cinnamon whiskey with an Old Style back ($9) and a shot of house bitters served with a PBR ($8). Management expects Barley & Brass to open within the next week or two.

NIGHTCRAWLERS

SEEN ON THE SCENE AT CALIFORNIA CLIPPER, 1002 N. CALIFORNIA AVE.

Iconic Humboldt Park bar California Clipper reopened earlier this fall under the guiding hand of new owner Brendan Sodikoff (Bavette's Bar & Boeuf, Maude's Liquor Bar, Green Street Smoked Meats, etc.). The new Clipper has an extensive cocktail menu and a retrofitted jukebox, so we stopped in to see how neighbors are enjoying the upgrades. MIGUEL GUZMAN, FOR RED EYE

Eleanor Fritz, 27, mortician

What are you drinking and why?
 I'm drinking whiskey... because it's life. It's the water of life!

Ha! I thought water was the water of life.
 Doesn't it depend on how much you drink?
 I'm 80 percent whiskey!

Erin Yancey

28, account manager

What brought you here tonight?
 I live in the general vicinity and I've been here once before with my mom and we had a great time. We had a great mom's night out.

So how do you like it now, as is?

I like it. I think they kept the general spirit of a dive bar, but with a little more flair, nicer cocktails.

Peter Schirripa

26, sales manager

What are you drinking and why?
 I'm drinking a Brown Derby, bourbon, grapefruit juice and honey. It sounded simple and tasty and it is. It's a good drink. Do you want one? I'll grab two.

Thanks, but no. Have you been here before?
 No. But I read about it. I know it's under new management.

We give clothing subscription service Le Tote a try

NETFLIX OF FASHION?

By Morgan Olsen | FOR REDEYE

When it comes to subscription boxes, I don't discriminate. I've signed up for beauty boxes, jewelry boxes, even snack boxes. I love the idea of discovering something that I might not find otherwise. That was the initial appeal with Le Tote, a monthly subscription service that promises a box full of curated clothing and accessories for $49.

How's it different from other stylist-in-a-box services? It has a hint of Rent the Runway's logic. Once you receive your tote, you can wear the items for as long as you'd like (no tags included). Then, you send back what you don't want and keep what you'd like to purchase—at a discounted rate, I should add. You can return your tote as many times as you'd like throughout the month—they send a new one as soon as the returned items are processed.

Le Tote, nicknamed the "Netflix of Fashion," is ideal for a 20-something who doesn't have hours to shop but craves a rotating closet. It's practical for the girl who's willing to buy and the girl who's never ready to commit. In theory, it's a dream come true. In reality, the underwhelming selection leaves something to be desired.

Time up front

Newbies should set aside a good chunk of time to register with Le Tote. Upon signing up, the site guided me through a laundry list of questions about my size and style preferences. Next, I scanned through dozens of items—tops, skirts, dresses, jewelry and scarves—and indicated what I liked. If you're not careful here, you could end up with something you don't want, as this is the pool the stylists draw from.

Admittedly, I registered on my lunch break and didn't give this part my undivided attention. But before I knew it, my first tote was on its way. You can peek at what's coming online, but I opted to keep it a surprise.

Unboxed

Despite my lack of patience, my first tote didn't disappoint. I received a Splendid blouse (1), BB Dakota sweater (2), J the Way cardigan (3), Gazel necklace (4) and Adia Kibur stud earrings (5). I was pleasantly surprised by the brands I recognized and intrigued by the ones I didn't know. I logged onto my account to check the value of each item, just so I'd know the consequences of falling deeply in love with anything (sometimes I'm practical like that).

As I mentioned earlier, Le Tote members get a discount on every item. It was reassuring to know that the most expensive item in my tote, a red Splendid blouse, was $84, marked down from $108. An investment? Sure. Out of my price range? Nope.

I tried on everything and determined what I'd test drive further. That's the other thing about Le Tote: It's smart to have a game plan. I knew I wanted to return the tote fairly quickly in order to get at least two shipments out of my monthly fee.

The sizes were all accurate and fit well, but that's not tough with tops and jewelry. I wore what I wanted, decided against keeping any of it, packaged it up in the prepaid envelope (no cleaning necessary) and shipped it back.

Second time around

That night, I logged onto my account and decided to clean up "My Closet," where Le Tote stores all those items you favorited at the beginning of the process. I scanned the new arrivals section, added a few more items to my list and removed the stuff I hastily liked on day one. Within three days I received an email that my next shipment was en route.

This time, I took a look at what was coming before it arrived: a French Connection tee, RD Style blouse, Saint Grace dress, Trading Trunk statement necklace and Adia Kibur stud earrings.

Peeping on the tote worked to my advantage—I pieced together outfits in my mind before the box even arrived at my desk. I'd pair the black designer tee with the blue-hued statement necklace for an effortless

Stitch Fix (stitchfix.com): Personal stylists handpick five pieces of clothing and accessories based on your budget, style preferences and size. A $20 fee is applied toward buying anything you'd like to keep; the rest goes back in the mail. (For women)

Tog & Porter (togandporter.com): After a one-on-one Skype consultation with a stylist, you'll receive a box of clothing and accessories. You can chat with your stylist about how to wear each piece before deciding what to keep. (For women)

Golden Tote (goldentote.com): Each month, the site launches two sales—a $49 box with 2-3 items and a $149 box with 5-7 items. You select an item or two and the rest are a surprise. (For women)

Rx Vintage (rxvintage.com): After choosing a budget, you take a style quiz and their stylists select one-of-a-kind, vintage pieces for you. They enforce a take-it-all or leave-it-all policy. (For women)

Trunk Club (trunkclub.com): Stylists put together a box of high-end clothing and accessories based on your responses to a survey. Pick your stylist's brain (by phone, text, email or through the club's iPhone app) about how to wear each item before deciding what to send back. (For men)

Curator and Mule (curatorandmule.com): Score a box of new accessories (think hats, socks, sunglasses) for each season of the year for $60 each. (For men)

Bombfell (bombfell.com): Answer questions about your style, budget and size to help guide a stylist, who will email you with a preview of selections before mailing them out. Try it all on at home and keep what you like. (For men) date-night look on Tuesday. The teardrop, vintage-inspired stud earrings would complement the two-toned blouse for a workday outfit on Wednesday. I'd rock the long-sleeved blue dress on Thursday or Friday.

With that kind of planning, it wouldn't be hard to get three boxes in one month. Because each box is valued at more than $200, it's a fairly practical move.

The verdict

The one fault I found with Le Tote is their selection. If you're looking for wardrobe staples (striped tees, black pencil skirts and stud earrings), this is the holy grail. But if you're hoping to try new trends or step out of your comfort zone, you might want to look elsewhere.

Although everything I received was practical, I was hoping for more of a fashion challenge—a box brimming with stuff I typically wouldn't pick up at the department store. Even after browsing and re-browsing the site's inventory, I couldn't find more than a handful of items that really excited me.

That said, I was impressed with both boxes and will definitely give Le Tote another shot. Is this a long-term wardrobe solution? No. Will your inner circle be impressed with constantly refreshed wardrobe? Abso-freaking-lutely.

GREENHEART SHOP

1714 N. Wells St. 312-667-4644

By Lauren Krause | FOR REDEYE

Stock up on green goodies this season at Greenheart Shop, a small boutique in Old Town that sells fashionable fair-trade clothing and accessories for men and women. Greenheart International opened the store in 2007 to bring its eco-driven mission to consumers. Brand manager Alexandria Pavel said her goal for the store is to carry eco-friendly brands that appeal to everyone. "I want to give people the opportunity to be wooed by style and design, and purchase products that have a positive impact on the environment and the artists," she said.

The shop's displays—think cozy knits, walls of intricate jewelry and soft light emitting from Mason jar chandeliers—inspired my cold-weather outfit. I slipped into organic cotton leggings (Pact, $38.95) and a warm hand-woven alpaca wool sweater (Shupaca, $299). I anchored my look with festive gold flats made from vintage leather (Sseko, $129.95), a leather clutch in complementing colors (Sseko, $39.95), delicate beaded earrings (Altiplano, $29.95), a leather bracelet (Faire Collection, $39.95) and a stone ring for color (World Finds, $18). For chillier days, I'd add this knit headband (World Finds, $19.95). LAUREN KRAUSE IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

'Grimm' star is riding an emotional rollercoaster

Los Angeles Times

Claire Coffee's Adalind Schade is the most cheered-yet-jeered character on NBC's supernatural procedural, "Grimm." The Northern California native has settled into her role as the show's perpetually mischievous Wesen creature, but her journey to this point has been a rocky one.

Coffee's easy smile makes it all the more vexing that her on-screen character is vindictive and, as executive producer Jim Kouf says, "puts a face to the monstrous behavior within human beings."

In real life, Coffee loves baking and antiquing and the rain—definitely a plus in Portland, Ore., where the series is filmed—but in the hit fantasy series, her character was being held prisoner in a dungeon after a member of a Wesen Royal family felt the need to retain her, luring her with misleading promises of getting her kidnapped baby back.

It's been three seasons, now a fourth, as Adalind, a hexenbiest. Do you remember when you were notified you got the role?

Claire Coffee: It was late on a Friday night and I was out with friends. I was so excited, but you know, you're in the pilot and it's potentially recurring ... so we'll see. But I knew she was badass. Actually, they had a scene that I auditioned with that didn't make it into the pilot where I was talking to a police officer, and at the end of the scene she ended up eating his head off. I'd never done anything like that before.

How has the "Grimm" speak been for you?

I had to speak some German, and it's always hard when you have to speak and you have no idea what you're saying. I also had to speak some French, but I do know a little, so that was easier. ...

When that storyline for her having a baby, then having it taken away, was introduced, how'd you react?

I thought it was an interesting diversion—not knowing where they would go with it. Initially she was going to sell her baby, so [it was about] trying to get in the head space of a sociopath who would sell her baby. Luckily, she opted not to and opened up a whole other range of emotions to be wrestling with, which was really fun for me.

Playing evil is always a joy. Just things that you would never ever get to explore in real life, hopefully, unless you're a sociopath. So you can explore the depths of those emotions safely. The arc of last season was such that I got to really go to such extremes in the emotional landscape. As an actor, that's just a dream.

'DUMBER' IDEA?

If you laughed the first time, these sequels might prove hysterical

Los Angeles Times

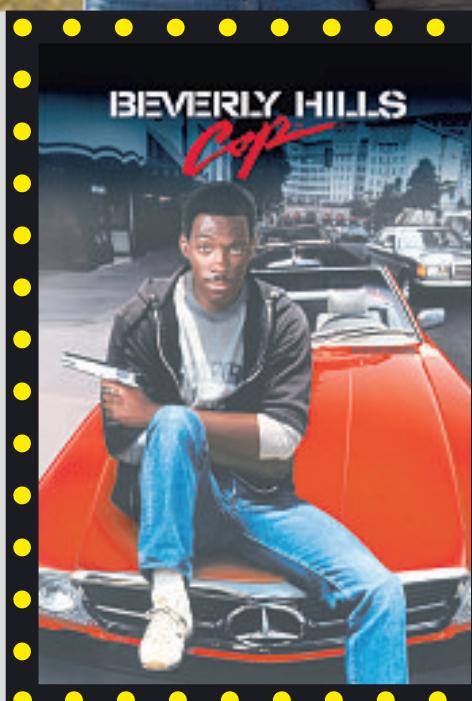

We know where you were Friday night. The same place we were, seated in a movie theater, laughing yourself stupid watching "Dumb and Dumber To." (We saw you. We waved. Repeatedly. Why didn't you wave back?)

With "Dumb and Dumber To" in theaters, it's now time to turn our attention to making sure Hollywood brings back other great comic duos. And because the clock is ticking, we've put together the following suggestion list. Feel free to use any/all of these ideas, though, if you do, we would ask for fair compensation. In fact, if you can loan us $500 right now, that would be great.

▲ Tango & Cash 2

Honestly, we don't remember what this movie was about or even who was in it. It's just the names: Tango. Cash. That's a sequel right there. We'll work out the details later.

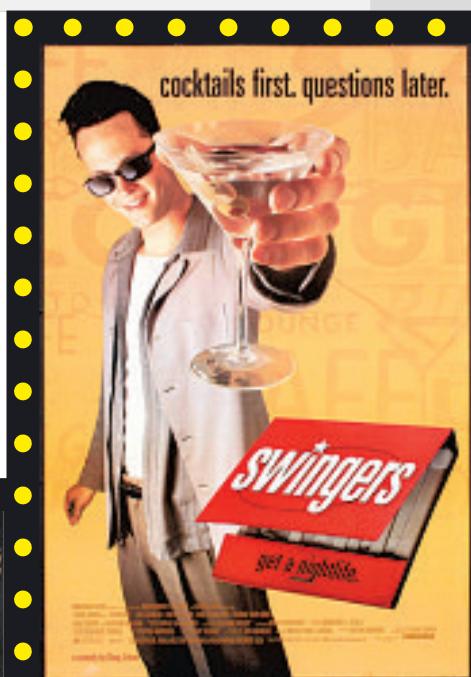

Bill & Ted's Unspeakably Sad Experience with Today's Public School System

Our heroes, now single dads with kids of their own in high school, travel back in time to ask our nation's founders why teachers unions hate their children and, by extension, America. Also, they get explosive diarrhea after sampling Martha Washington's oyster stew.

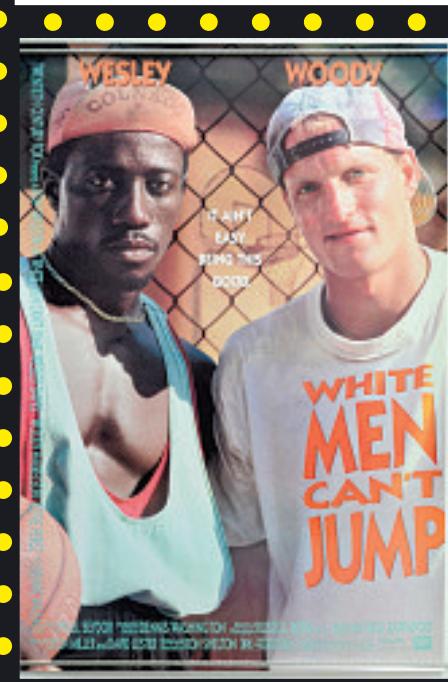

▲ Beverly Hills Cop 4: Keeping Up with the Kardashians

Yes, they say they're making a "Beverly Hills Cop 4." But ours is better—and cheaper, because you don't need Eddie Murphy. It starts when the diamond tiara belonging to Kim's cat goes missing and ends with Judge Reinhold triumphantly announcing: "Case. Closed." In between: laughter, tears and a really long, loud public argument about whose turn it is to change the litter box that is (and you're going to have to trust me on this) more entertaining than you can possibly imagine!

▲ Swingers 2: Still Money After All These Years

Jon Favreau's Mikey moved back to New York because we know that girl dumped him five minutes after the movie ended. He's miserable, living in Brooklyn, working in an artisan ice cream shop where he rides a bike to churn the cream. However many calories he loses he puts right back on eating all that ice cream. (Curse that employee discount!) Then Vince Vaughn shows up, tells Favreau to shave off that handlebar mustache and five minutes later they're driving a taco truck to VEGAS, BABY!!!

White Men (Still) Can't Jump

Because they're, what, 50 now, and if they couldn't jump when they were 30, they sure as hell can't jump now. Until, that is, they meet a genie played by Shaquille O'Neal and then faster than you can say "Kazaam," these guys are joining the Lakers, balling with Kobe and bringing an NBA championship back to L.A.!

Winter Basics.

Sweatshop-Free Clothing, Made in Los Angeles.

All American Apparel factories are located in Los Angeles and are Sweatshop-Free, meaning our workers earn fair wages and have access to affordable healthcare, as well as an on-site medical clinic. For us, higher pay for industrial workers leads to stronger employee morale, optimized productivity and efficiency, a better and more consistent quality of work and ultimately a happier employee who wants to stay and grow with the company. Rather than relentlessly pursuing outsourcing and low-cost wages, at American Apparel we are committed to leveraging art, design and technology to advance our business process.

The 'Daily' crush

Further proving our point that Benedict Cumberbatch should've been People's sexiest man, Jon Stewart heaped adoration on the "Sherlock" star Tuesday night. "I have a lot of guests on the show. You're the first guest where ... I want to rip your clothes off and sell it on Ebay," Stewart told the recently-engaged Cumberbunny, who was on "The Daily Show" promoting his new movie, "The Imitation Game." Your intentions don't sound entirely pure, sir.

Natural beauty

Demi Lovato really likes getting creative with her self-care. In the new issue of Glam Belleza Latina magazine, she talks about how she got interested in taking care of her skin. "As a kid I'd play with homemade recipes, like putting pineapple on my face to exfoliate my skin and doing facial steams with lavender or peppermint oils," she said. "I just loved doing stuff like that." So ... what does happen when you put pineapple on your face?

Hems(worth) the hype?

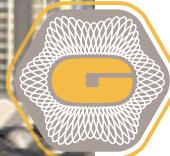

After guessing that folks like Benedict Cumberbatch and Drake might grace the cover of People's Sexiest Man Alive issue for 2014, it came as a great surprise that the mag completely ignored our advice and went with "Thor" star Chris Hemsworth. WE WOULD LIKE TO POINT OUT, however, that two RedEye picks, Chris Pratt and Idris Elba, did make appearances in tiny photos along the bottom of the cover, which featured a photo of Hemsworth that looks like Brad Pitt circa "Legends of the Fall."

Sex freaked-out

Looks like you won't find Anna Kendrick in line when "Fifty Shades of Grey" hits theaters in February. "The '50 Shades of Grey' dude looks just like 'Love Actually' kid. I feel less turned on and more like....I should call child services..." she tweeted Monday. She's talking about Thomas Brodie-Sangster, who now stars on "Game of Thrones" and doesn't REALLY look like Jamie Dornan, but we still appreciate Anna's zestiness.

THE QUOTE

"I don't really care that some trashy girl, like, now all of the sudden wants to [bleep] me. That's not really that interesting to me."

—Ansel Elgort, to GQ, on his newfound fame from movies like "The Fault in Our Stars" and "Divergent." He added: "What's interesting to me is the fact that creatively I can do anything now and people will pay attention."

THE DIGIT

7 That's the length in seconds of a Beyoncé clip from a track called "7/11" that leaked Wednesday morning. There's not much to garner from the short clip other than that Mrs. Carter would really like you to "clap like you don't care." Works for us!
